

A specialty that involves the experienced installation of sheet and liquid membranes, waterproofing is intended to be durable enough to last the anticipated life of a building.

Premature waterproofing failures lead to catastrophic building damage and expensive and intrusive repairs that can impact building occupancy. Typically, they occur in elevated entrance walkways, private balconies and parking garages. Failures of waterproofing relating to elevated walkways can be particularly problematic because of disruption to residential unit access.

After being called out for years on leak calls, only to discover that the leaks weren't caused by roofs, we began removing and installing these systems. We install Acrylic and Urethane systems, and won't shy away from the smallest patio or the largest parking deck.
